Any private or personal.Q: Update price of an ordered product with different quantity without quantity table I have a custom module which needs to update quantity of a product from a 3rd party site. I want it to happen automatically. It seems the only way to do it is by updating the original order with the quantity and then updating the price after the product is fulfilled. Is there any way I can do it without updating the price table? A: If your module is an extension to Magento CE 1.9.x then you could simply extend the product list getOrder() method, something like: protected function _getOrder() { /* $items contains your items data array / / $item contains each of your items */ //For some reason this can't be a simple loop because there is an implode method on the array, so I'll just do something like: foreach ($items as $item) { foreach ($items as $item_2) { foreach ($item as $key => $value) { $this->_setItemQty($value, $item_2[$key]);

Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to a system for monitoring of medical equipment and data, and more particularly, to a method and system for monitoring medical equipment and data. 2. Related Art Typically, hospitals and similar healthcare providers use information technology such as operating room information systems or hospital information systems for managing and accessing operating room and hospital records.

These systems typically include a number of software applications for managing the operating room and hospital records. Additionally, the software applications are typically configured by an information technology team. For example, on a daily basis the information technology team configures the software applications to monitor operating room and hospital data. Generally, the applications include a number of user interfaces configured by the information technology team. These user interfaces are used for remote and real-time monitoring and controlling of operating room and hospital records. Typically, there is at least one person assigned to each operating room and/or to the hospital.

This is because the person is responsible for monitoring and controlling the medical records associated with the operating room or hospital. In addition, the person is
